VAFB set to launch Delta II

COMPILED FROM REPORTS
30th Space Wing Public Affairs

Team Vandenberg is set to launch a Boeing Delta II rocket carrying five Iridium satellites into a low-earth orbit today at 10 a.m. from Space Launch Complex-2 on North Vandenberg.

Col. Robert M. Worley II, 30th Space Wing commander, will be the spacelift commander for this mission.

The satellites will serve as spares for Iridium Satellite's global voice and data communications network. This mission marks the 101st Boeing Delta II mission since 1989 and the 12th Iridium launch since 1997.

Between May 1997 and November 1998, Delta II vehicles, launched from Vandenberg successfully placed 55 of Iridium's satellites into low-earth orbit.

A constellation of 66 low-earth orbiting Iridium satellites will provide global satellite voice and data solutions with complete coverage of the Earth including oceans, airways and Polar Regions.

Iridium currently provides service to the U.S. Department of Defense under a multi-year contract.

For more information about the Iridium payloads or the Delta II rocket visit the following websites at www.iridium.com or www.spacecom.af.mil/hqafspc/library/default.htm.

Air Force remains committed to AEF rotation

BY TECH. SGT. TIM DOUGHERTY
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON — The combination of America's war on terrorism and steady state commitments worldwide has put increased strain on the Air Force's aerospace expeditionary forces. However, except for a few stressed career fields, officials at the Pentagon say normal rotations should be back soon.

"Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John P. Jumper is committed to the AEF construct — a three-month deployment with a 12-month period at home," said Maj. Gen. Jeffrey B. Kohler, director of operational plans, deputy chief of staff for air and space operations.

"Given the war on terrorism, we had to go through a momentary blip in our rotation schedule," he said. "However, it looks like we're going to be on time in bringing home about 90 percent of the people who are currently deployed. We will rotate the forces deployed for operations Enduring Freedom, Northern Watch and Southern Watch so that those who deployed first will be allowed to rotate home first to the maximum extent possible."

There are some exceptions, Kohler said. While Air Force leaders are working hard to come up with a solution, a very small number of career fields may not be able to rotate as scheduled, he said.

"We know that there are some

Channel 2 leaps forward

MASTER SGT. LLOYD CONLEY
30th Space Wing Public Affairs

Team Vandenberg will soon see a vastly different look on the commander's access channel.

The Team Vandenberg Network or channel 2 as it is commonly referred to, will display state-of-the-art graphics, electronic images and play digital programs like Air Force News or 30th Communications Squadron productions.

The major differences between the old and new system is that videos or slides had to be played off an analog tape or created on a character generator, said Mark Ferguson, 30th CS television editor. With the new system, elements like slides and video are converted to digital files for broadcasting on Team Vandenberg News.

The entire broadcasting and authoring system is run through a computer that's totally dedicated to channel 2, Ferguson continued. The advantage is that less things can go wrong with the system. Everything is backed up on a computer and can easily be restored should a problem occur. Eventually it will take less people and less man-hours to air programming and operate the system.

Ferguson said the new look is a lot more pleasing to the eye. Features include videos, graphic and photographic images displayed in conjunction with base messages and announcements.

The TVN is a stark contrast to the current system which limits programming options to changing screen and text colors, said Chris Zenor 30th CS chief of motion media.

Another benefit of the system is that customers who want to broadcast a message on TVN can soon e-mail it or bring an electronic version of it to the public affairs office.

Then it's simply a matter of editing and in-putting the information into the computer system for broadcast.

The Team Vandenberg Network is targeting the month of February to begin its new line up of programming. Stay tuned Team "V."

AFSPC chiefs induct commander into elite circle

BY STAFF SGT. ANDREW LEONHARD
30th Space Wing Public Affairs

Team Vandenberg was on hand to witness the Air Force Space Command Order of the Sword ceremony held at Peterson AFB Jan. 25.

Command chief master sergeants, Ronald "Ron" Kriete, 14th Air Force, and Michael Morey, 30th Space Wing, paid tribute to Gen. Ed Eberhart, AFSPC commander, who was inducted into the Order of the Sword.

As the commander's leaders, as well as commander in chief of U.S. Space Command and North American Aerospace Defense Command, Eberhart joins a short list of just over 200 Air Force commanders who have received the time-honored sword. The sword is a symbol of respect paid rarely by the enlisted corps for their leaders' abilities and support of the enlisted forces. Eberhart is the sixth in AFSPC since the command's inception in 1982.

"This award is special to me because it comes from a special group — the Air Force enlisted force.

To be honored by these professionals is humbling and truly the highlight of my career," said Eberhart. "It exceeded my wildest expectations."

The ceremony was postponed from the original Sept. 28, 2001, date after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The delay did not soften the impact. The general was brought to the front of the Colorado Springs hotel by horse-drawn stagecoach in honor of Colorado's western past. Inside the large ballroom, the stage was festooned with a mammoth American flag backdrop as more than 500 cheering attendees gave standing ovation after standing ovation during the ceremony. The honor guards from across the command were present in their sharpest regalia. The Band of the Rockies brought the house down with one show-stopping tune after another.

Kriete served as the event's first sergeant for the evening.

The chief said, "as I looked out across the 500 plus airmen in attendance, all showed expressions of pride and professionalism. It made me proud to be an airman in the U.S. Air Force and Air Force Space Command." He went on to say, "It was evident the troops were all there to deliver a resounding message. 'We stand before you tonight Gen. Eberhart, to honor you as a leader among leaders and an Airmen among Airmen.'"

Morey said the ceremony is one rich in history and steeped in tradition making it the finest ceremonial military event he's ever seen or been involved in.

"The pomp and circumstance is unlike anything I've experienced," he said.

"A sword is the symbol of truth, justice, and power and Gen. Ed Eberhart truly exemplifies the characteristics of the sword for all the enlisted men and women of this great command," the chief said.

AFSPC Command Chief Master Sgt. Kevin Estrem served as the sergeant major for the program. As the primary emcee, he was impressed with the enthusiasm of the moment and the dignity of the ceremony.

Gen. Ed Eberhart, flanked by Chief Estrem (left) and Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force Frederick Finch, thanks the enlisted corps for his induction into the Order of the Sword.

"I don't know how it could have been any better," he said. "It was a real Hollywood production. The general was honored and humbled. But he's earned it, and we wanted to do it up right for him."

"It was the first time I've ever been to an Order of the Sword ceremony," said Master Sgt. Peggy Scott, the chief of career management for AFSPC Reserve Forces. "I walked out with a lot of pride."

In remarks to the audience, the general spoke of the reliability of AFSPC's enlisted force.

"You should understand how important what you do is," he said. "We thank you and challenge you.

Raves hit off-limits list

BY CAPT. CHRISTOPHER MORGAN
30th Space Wing Staff Judge Advocate

Prompted by a dramatic increase in the number of prosecutions of military members assigned to Vandenberg AFB for illegal use of club drugs, most commonly ecstasy, Colonel Robert M. Worley II, 30th Space Wing commadner, recently gave an order prohibiting attendance at "Raves" and Rave-like events.

A survey of the evidence presented in these drug prosecutions indicated clearly that the drug use was almost always associated with "Raves" where many of those convicted felt pressured to use illegal drugs. Command action was therefore deemed appropriate to prevent service members from being exposed to or victimized by these crime-conducive conditions.

The order recognizes that a "Rave" may take various forms and be held at various locations, but delineates the common characteristics frequently associated with such events:

- ◆ They are usually all-ages events.
- ◆ Hours of operation often continue until the early morning hours.

- ◆ House or techno style music is played and attendees frequently dance holding glow sticks.

- ◆ People wear pacifiers, surgical masks and use otherwise legal substances, such as Vick's Vapor Rub to enhance the effects of illegal drugs.

In addition, the order further prohibits attendance at events, gatherings or locations, the primary purpose of which is the consumption, use or sale of illegal drugs.

Such locations include such obvious places as crack houses, opium dens and hash bashes.

The order however, is not intended to prohibit attendance at conventional licensed establishments in the business of selling alcoholic beverages that keep normal business hours (bar, taverns, etc.) unless such establishments facilitate "Rave" atmospheres.

Neither does the order prohibit attendance at musical events or performances such as concerts or festivals. The order also contains a mechanism whereby a member can, if unsure whether an event falls within the prohibitions of this order, request permission from their unit commander to attend.

The order, which applies to all members of this command as well as tenant units, provides that attending a "Rave" or Rave-like event without authorization is punishable under Articles 90 or 92, Uniform Code of Military Justice. In addition, it applies at all times, including when a member is in leave status. Currently, every unit is taking measures to ensure that each of its members are briefed and acknowledge the terms of the order.

This order will remain in effect from 28 January 2002 to 31 July 2002, after which it will be reviewed and a determination made whether it shall be extended.

"The bottom line," said Lt. Col. Mike Fleming, 30th SW Staff Judge Advocate, "is that this is a readiness issue and the presence of military members at 'Raves' is contrary to the health, morale, discipline, readiness and personal safety of our members."

Team V supports Lompoc youth

BY STAFF SGT. REBECCA BONILLA
30th Space Wing Public Affairs

Working steadily for more than a year now, volunteers from the base and surrounding communities have erected a permanent home for the Lompoc Valley Community Youth Center.

Chief Master Sgt. Archie Mitchell and Senior Master Sgt. Cliff Tebbe, both of 14th Air Force, are spearheading the volunteer effort for the base and as Tebbe said, "It's been a labor of love."

Dr. Gloria Willis and her husband, Clarence, began the project several years ago when state and county grants for a Lompoc youth center ended.

"I got my husband to mortgage his debt-free home to buy that property," Willis said.

Using their own home as collateral, the couple purchased property on the corner of K and College streets, across from Lompoc High School. The couple's dream of finding a permanent home for the youth center took a giant leap forward.

That dream took a short detour, however, when a local contractor informed the Willis' that it would cost upwards of $150,000 to complete the project.

But it was a noble cause and the Willis' refused to be so easily deterred. The contractor decided to donate the labor and coordinate getting the equipment necessary to get started.

Since then, the Defense Reutilizing and Marketing Office here donated three temporary modular facilities and base people have lent countless hours to turn those mods into one permanent structure for the center.

When it officially opens for business sometime around May, the youth center will offer not only games like soccer, basketball and boxing to area young people but computer classes, counseling and tutoring as well.

"I make them do their homework," Willis said. "That's the most important thing."

"You can't ever offer enough programs for kids in a community," Mitchell said.

Years after claiming the title of U.S. Air Forces Europe light heavyweight boxing champion, Mitchell got involved with the Lompoc Boxing Club. He needs a permanent place to house the club and the community youth center looks like the perfect partner.

Since last January, Mitchell, Tebbe and their band of base volunteers have hung drywall, painted, done interior construction, mowed lawns and helped put a new roof on the facility. Once it's complete, Mitchell will need help funding and building a permanent boxing ring at the center.

As an Air Force Reservist, Mitchell spent the last 20 years working full-time for the Federal prison system. During that time he met a lot of people who he feels could have been helped by a center like the Lompoc Valley Community Youth Center.

"A lot of people who are incarcerated just didn't have positive options in their youth," Mitchell said. "I see this as a positive option for kids that may be heading down the wrong road."

There's still a lot of work to be done before the center is ready to open its doors, Mitchell said. Among other interior finishing touches, the kitchen needs a stove and refrigerator and the parking lot needs to be paved.

The volunteer opportunities won't stop once the center is open either, Tebbe said. Once construction is complete and the center is open, the Willis' will still need help to staff it.

"Kids used to stand in front of the bike store here and watch the kids from the rec center across the street get on the bus for field trips," Willis said. "These kids didn't have any money to go on field trips, but they needed a drug-free place to go and hang out."

There won't be any membership fees or dues for the children at the youth center but the Willis' will need to raise funds for things like sports uniforms and buses to and from competitions.

To volunteer, call Mitchell at 605-8081 or the Willis' at 735-6433.

Ride to top worth wait

BY MASTER SGT. TY FOSTER
30th Space Wing Public Affairs

They began their Air Force careers before some of the airmen they lead were even born. The stripes they proudly wear seem to stretch from their elbows to their shoulders – veritable shields. They are at the pinnacle of their careers – they are chiefs.

Saturday, Team Vandenberg recognizes six airmen for achieving the rank of chief master sergeant when the Chiefs' Group holds its annual induction ceremony.

"Going through the Chief's Induction Ceremony was one of the proudest moments in my military career," said Chief Master Sgt. Greg Egan, an inductee in last year's ceremony. "What made it even more special was that I had my wife and three children with me to celebrate the occasion."

For Egan, making the top enlisted grade was an eye-opening experience.

"My focus could no longer be just work center, branch, unit or even squadron-centric – I needed to be available to all enlisted, regardless of affiliation," the Vandenberg Chiefs' Group president said.

It takes patience and perseverance to make chief, for many the wait is too long.

To illustrate, Egan said, "Have you ever stood in line for a popular 'scream' ride at a major theme park?" The lines go on forever and one begins to wonder if they'll ever make it to the front.

"But, unbelievably, once you finally get to the ride, there's a sense of major joy – and a little apprehension, well, maybe a lot!" he said. "An enlisted member on the road to making chief needs to 'stand in line' for a very long time in most cases."

"Just like in a theme park, some can't stand the wait, and they get out of line," Egan said.

One of this year's inductees stayed in line as long as he could.

After wearing senior master sergeant stripes for nine years, Chief Master Sgt. John Gunther, 14th Air Force security forces manager, was No. 3 on the selection list.

While he said the wait was worth it, it came at a price.

"I wish my father was alive to see this accomplishment," Gunther said. His wife, Tech. Sgt. Maria Gunther of the 30th Communications Squadron, and many friends will join him for Saturday's event.

For Gunther, taking care of people is job No. 1.

"Our airmen get the job done," he said. "We need to continue mentoring our force because they ensure mission accomplishment."

Egan said the induction drives that very point home.

"The ceremony is an opportunity to charge our new chiefs and help them realize the weight and responsibility they now carry as a member of the Air Force's highest enlisted cadre," Egan said.

The event's guest speaker is retired Chief Master Sgt. John Prossor. The chief served at Vandenberg during the early 1980s working on various programs associated with the activation of the space shuttle program here. He retired from Det. 9, Space and Missile Systems Center with more than 30 years in the Air Force.

The 2002 Chief Induction Ceremony kicks off with a social hour at 6 p.m. Dinner follows at 7 p.m. Military attire for the evening is mess dress or semi formal uniform. Civilian attire is formal wear or coat and tie.

AEF: AF requests more manpower stressed career fields, such as security forces, combat communications and firefighters, that might have to stay a little longer," Kohler said. "But that's not to say that absolutely everyone in those career fields will be staying longer."

The deployment picture will start to come into focus by the middle of February when the Air Force begins scheduling for the rotation in March, he said.

"It might work out that only one or two unit type codes out of an entire civil engineering squadron might be the stressed career field," Kohler said. "We just don't know yet because we haven't gotten down to that level of fidelity."

The performance of the AEF in Operation Enduring Freedom is what caused the stress on certain career fields in the first place, Kohler said.

"The Air Force is sort of a victim of its own success," Kohler said. "The reason we are stressed is simple - we do such a great job. We went out and set up these bases and started generating sorties as soon as we were asked. I think the results speak for themselves in the war on terrorism in Afghanistan. The (U.S.) Central Command commander in chief could not have done what he did without the superb work of all the airmen who went out and set it up."

To ease the problems the Air Force has in stressed career fields under current requirements, about 10 percent of the people will stay deployed a little longer - some up to 135 days; others, up to 179 days, Kohler said. To cover the overlap, the second part of the solution will be to reach into the next AEF and bring replacement unit type codes forward about 45 days. Any reduction in current requirements may get the AEF cycle on track a little bit quicker, he said.

Another way to relieve some of the burden on our deployed people is to find additional airmen who normally do not deploy and place them in an AEF library.

"We'd like to be able to find people we haven't originally had in an AEF library who can deploy but normally don't," Kohler said.

Other fixes for stressed career fields will take some time and may only be resolved with increased manpower. Although the Air Force has asked for an end-strength increase of about 22,000 with 7,000 requested for this year, because of training requirements, this is a long-term solution, Kohler said.

"This is an extraordinary time for the Air Force and our country," Jumper recently told commanders. "The nation is grateful for the sacrifices our airmen continue to make in meeting our commitments to fight the war on terrorism and defend the American homeland. The secretary and I are proud of the job you are doing and we are personally committed to maintaining the AEF rotation schedule to the greatest possible extent."

SWORD: Chief's vote unanimously

We will never be able to thank you enough for what you do. You serve so selflessly. I believe you are the heroes - the men and women of the armed forces. Our nation knows whom to call. They know whom they can rely on. You're not going to let them down. I'm blessed to serve with you."

All command chiefs of AFSPC must agree in a vote to honor the nominee for an Order of the Sword. If just one says no, the award is not given.

Judging from the heartfelt emotion shown at the ceremony, it was an easy vote for the chiefs.

There was enough enthusiasm to go around. There were many standing ovations at the ceremony - one was even reserved for Estrem for his efforts in bringing the ceremony to fruition, despite the war against terrorism.

"The general prompted it with his comments. It's the first time I've ever received a standing ovation from 520 cheering people," the chief said. (Master Sgt. Austin Carter, AFSPC Public Affairs contributed to this story.)
